

I have been advised of the CBA's intent to try to overturn Indiana's telephone privacy law and I want to voice my opinion. I'm not sure at what point the American people lost the right to use their telephone as they choose or when businesses developed the right to decide for us but, I, as well as the rest of the nation should be allowed to choose whom they wish to talk to. It's bad enough my email is full of garbage but I refuse for my answering machine to be packed with unwelcomed visitors daily. I do not need to be bombarded with sales calls. If I want their services I'm quite capable of calling them...when it's convenient for me.

Thank you, Cindi Johnson
